Who is the happiest of men? He who values the merits of others and in their pleasure takes joy, even as though it were his own.—J. S. Blackie.

The meat strike, as well as the election, is over.

Dr. George C. Lorimer formerly pastor of Tremont Temple Boston, and a noted preacher, died last Thursday in France. He had not been well for some time.

Bar Harbor has been entertaining some very distinguished personages this summer. The Archbishop of Canterbury has been there this week as the guest of J. Pierpont Morgan.

Maine and Vermont have set a very fast pace for the states which do not vote until November and incidentally have dispelled the slight doubt that may have existed as to Roosevelt's prospects.

While Vermont was rolling up such a glorious victory last week the Democratic majority in Arkansas was cut nearly in two. The opening guns in the campaign had a pronounced Republican echo.

Col. Gaston has decided not to be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor of Massachusetts this year. Did he reach this decision after a conference with Sheehan or after the Vermont election?

And now Richard Olney declines the Democratic nomination for governor of Massachusetts. It seems to be up to Hamlin, Thayer or Douglass. After all it is only a formality, like the Democratic nomination in Maine.

A warship can burn money with her guns about as fast as she can get away with coal in her furnaces. Some of the guns fire two shots a minute at $400 a shot, and others of the quicker firing kind take $70 to a shot. A ship of the Japanese Kasuga type can use up $35,000 worth of ammunition in five minutes.

Miss Clara Webb, a young woman of Portland, Ore., has just made the ascent of Mount Hood alone. She was camping with a party just below the snow line and one day decided to attempt the climb to the peak. She started on the impulse of the moment, took no food with her, and was nearly exhausted when she reached the crest. After resting for a short time she began the descent, and made the perilous trip in safety. The danger of her feat can easily be understood when it is considered that the mountain is over 11,000 feet high.

The Boston Herald poses as an independent paper—but its readers know that its independence is entirely on the Democratic side, that it never says a favorable word for the Republican party if it can help it, and always applauds when possible for Democracy. We regard therefore as considerably significant its utterance on the Vermont election, under the heading "Taggart Surprised."

Chairman Taggart and Mr. Sheehan of the Democratic national committee professed to be "surprised" that the Republican majority in Vermont is not larger. They are the only Democrats we have heard of who are assuming the disposition of Mark Tapley on that subject. Whether it is creditable to them is perhaps a question. We think it is not creditable, but decidedly foolish, and likely to make them a laughing stock. Suppose the Republicans did hold more meetings than the Democrats. That is no respectable excuse. Why did not the Democrats hold the most meetings, if that was an important factor? Was it because they did not know their business? The Republicans will hold the most meetings in every state if the Democrats allow them to do it. But the truth is that meetings had little to do with the result. Republican meetings were not well attended. The people made up their minds in their homes, and didn't care for meetings. On election day they voted. The Democratic campaign is not making a serious impression anywhere, so far as we can find out. Tom Taggart may be a great man in Indiana, but he has not captured New York. August Belmont may be a great man in Wall street but his influence is not large elsewhere. According to the best information we can obtain, there never was a national campaign so botched and crippled as this one is by the conceited little great men who are responsible for its management. When they get out statements like this one about the Vermont election, they become ridiculous.

ST. LOUIS AND BEYOND.

Gen. Cilley's Impressions on His Return To New England.

(Sixteenth Letter.)

Before completing the account of the Pacific coast, including a second visit to St. Louis and a descent down the Grand Canyon to the Colorado river by the Bright Angel trail, I am impelled to tell the impression made as on my return the good old state of Maine met my eyes. In wide distinction from the plains of the west, the green fields of Maine approach you with the confidence of children and wave their hands as they apparently rush by you, while the trees bend above you, with nearer skies, and all the brooks laugh in gladness with crystal waters. The orchards which in May cheered my western anticipations, now proffered their ripened fruit on bending boughs, as, laden with memories, I again behold the rivers and lakes of Maine.

Through the courtesy of the Maine Central Railroad I was borne through the valley of the Sebago and Saco to the White Mountains at the northern limit of the Appalachian range, which looks northward to the Labrador heights, the oldest land of the American continent and which raised its head above the waste of waters long before any of the land of Europe made itself known to sunlight. As I neared North Conway the conductor informed me that the observation car would soon be attached. To secure an early entrance to this car I passed to the car in the rear, when the following surprise brought a shout of gladness: I beheld Frank W. Fuller and wife, Edward D. Spear and wife and Edward F. Berry and wife, forming a sort of climax, as I noticed the seats in succession. They were on a vacation outing and bound for Randolph, N. H., where they would look on Mount Washington from the north and west. We all stopped several hours at the Fabyan house, but Mt. Washington's summit was hid above the clouds and the location of its top was only indicated by the truss work of the Mountain R. R., which pointed like a huge dash the way to the Tip-top House.

At the Fabyan I found in charge of the carriage and saddle horses, a member of the First Maine Cavalry—Geo. W. Lane—who was present in its ranks at Lee's surrender at Appomattox. He had the distinction of driving the first carriage to the top of Mount Washington. A picture of himself and the carriage appears in one of the hotel publications. The Fabyan house was largely peopled by Jews, nearly three hundred occupying rooms for the season yearly. I noticed that stock operations were prominent features in conversations.

The rest of the day and half of the next I spent in viewing the hotel and found that each had a distinctive flavor and character. Mount Pleasant hotel I did not fully catch but that of Mount Washington house was evident in various forms. The first was the price, six dollars and upward. When I looked up and saw rooms with windows nearly as large as the entire front of a Northport cottage, it was clear that the "up" price was two or three figures. This hotel stands on a rounded top of a gentle hill, whose rugged sides could be imagined from certain parts not fully reclaimed. The immense boulders which dot the slopes stand like monarchs of the stone age, while the land is smoothed with a lawn like carpet of green to their very feet, around which a frieze of ferns clusters. The forest reaches down at one point to touch the house, showing inviting paths for seclusion and silence. The wide meadows towards the railroad have been planned from stumps and brush and a hundred acres or so invites to wide possibilities for golf. Many parties in bright costumes and bare arms were scattered over its surface.

The Crawford House, with the mountains and woods hovering near it, with its lakes of still waters from whence the Saco river commences its bounding race for the sea, was quiet and restful. I talked long with a comrade from the state of New Jersey. He comes there year after year for its homelike atmosphere and the attractive walks in its vicinity. As I approached the office desk, the clerk, a grey-haired man, remarked that my countenance was familiar and asked when I was there before. I replied, "in 1855." He laughed and said he came there in 1872.

The old Crawford House was situated below the lake and looked down the vistas of the Crawford Notch. The present house stands on the divide, so that the water from one side of the roof flows down the Saco river to the Gulf of Maine, while the other side turns the divide to the north to the Connecticut river and joins the ocean in Long Island Sound. What a distant and distinct memory did the casual and functional remark of the grey-haired clerk awake. Half a century ago, in company with my brother and sister, and a cousin Miss Nealley, who subsequently became the wife of Senator Grimes of Iowa, rode on horseback from the Glen House to the top of Mount Washington, five miles, and thence onward over Mount Pleasant and the connecting ranges to the Crawford House, encountering a heavy shower on the summit—how homelike and comfortable was our shelter at the Crawford house of old.

The tragedy of the Willey house in Crawford Notch in 1884 was pictured and printed in most of the earlier school books and should have never disappeared. Its effect on my memory and life was the important lesson, that it is not always wise to run when you are frightened.

The mountains of New England all have beautiful attractive features and a distinct impression of home. They are not inapproachable, mysterious and distant like the heights of the Rockies. As I left the Presidential range and came coastward along the rushing Saco, the day and the weather prophet both indicated a rain for the morrow, and my desire to see Sebago lake and the Songo river was held in obedience till the train reached Sebago station, when I went to the car platform to decide. Looking up, I saw a glimpse of the blue sky above me and off I went. The clouds closed immediately, but that night I was housed at Victoria Cottage, and the next day, without a shower and with the sun pleasantly curtained I sailed over the waters of Sebago lake, through the winding Songo river and up the "Bay of Naples" and the waters beyond, till I reached the landing for Bridgton, where by cutting short my trip I had an hour or so—which I improved by a ride on the top of a stage coach to the village of Bridgton and had a five minutes' conversation with comrade Melville B. Cook, who after four years of service helped hold the Rebels in bay at Appomattox. While passing through the Bay of Naples I formed a happy acquaintance with Charles Green and Songo river and Sebago lake have this enduring joy—they are enjoyed for their own quality and beauty and re-enjoyed as existing in history, romance and song. Whittier writes:

Around Sebago's lonely lake
There linger not a breeze to break
The mirror which its waters make.
The solemn pines along its shore,
The firs which hang its gray rocks o'er,
Are painted on its glassy shore.

Longfellow says:
Nowhere such a devout stream,
Save in fancy or in dream,
Winding slow through bush and brake,
Links together lake by lake.
Walled with woods or sandy shelf,
Ever doubling on itself,
Flows the stream so still and slow
That it hardly seems to flow.

In the mirror of its tide
Tangled thickets on each side
Hang united, and between Floating cloud of sky serene.

Elizabeth Akers sings:
From where Maine's farthest northern brook
Along its valley tinkles,
In shadow, full of tender glooms,
In sun, of diamond-twinkles,
To where some slow Florida tide
By broad savannas passes,
To creep through stambrous everglades,
Or drowse in still morasses,
Of all the streams that sleep in shade,
Or in the sunlight quiver,
There's none so wild, wild and sweet
As lovely Songo River.

Designer Watson who has made the plans for Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht, declines to design another cup challenger. He assigns ill health as the cause but another reason is that he is probably wearied by the constant defeat of his yachts. Sir Thomas is much disappointed at Watson's refusal and says that if Harbordoff will go to London and be a citizen for a year he will guarantee him a commission to build a yacht.

simplicity, daintiness and charm. She is a native of Denver, Colorado, and a newspaper woman of exactly the type one would not expect a newspaperwoman to be: quiet, demure and feminine, sympathetic and tactful—such a woman as could be expected to write a book that would speak intimately to every mother and every father of the most uplifting event in their lives. She was born in a frontier town in Wyoming and lived most of her girlhood in a little two-room cabin which boasted of two fireplaces and a two-quart iron teakettle that cost $17. She has great ability as a draftsman; at one time she was an expert illustrator for the newspapers by what was known as the chalk process. Her newspaper career in the West has been exceedingly varied and she is especially noted for her ability as a writer and gatherer of political news.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

A Love Sonnet.

The merry cuckoo, messenger of spring,
His trumpet shrill hath thrice already sounded,
That waits all lovers wait upon their king,
Who now is coming forth with garland crowned.
With none who would the choir of birds resound,
Their anthem sweet, devised of love's praise,
That all the woods their echoes back resound,
As if they knew the meaning of their lays.
But 'mongst them all, which did love's honour raise,
No word was heard of her that most it ought;
But she his precept proudly disobeyed,
And doth his idle message set at naught.
Therefore, O love, unless she turn to thee
The cuckoo end, let her a rebel be!

A review of Maine's gubernatorial vote for the years since 1854 shows some very interesting facts and figures. Aside from the presidential years of 1896 and 1900, when Bryanism had scored many Democrats into the camp of the Republican party, there has never been but one year that the Republican plurality rose above 30,000, and that was in 1894 when the Democrats made only a shallow pretense of a fight—casting but 30,405 votes. In 1892, the year which the Republicans thought fairest by way of comparison, the Democrats did make a fight, and cast 55,397 votes, which is over 4000 more than they cast this year after the most vigorous campaign that has been waged in Maine for a great many years. The Republican plurality that year was 12,303, and because it was that low the Democrats affected to be very much amused because the Republicans had the "audacity" to offer that year by way of comparison. And yet, we submit, this is the fairest possible comparison, for both parties were making a good fight in 1892, under normal conditions. Using that as a basis the real extent of Mr. Cobb's victory becomes known. His plurality is 14,827 larger than that received by the Republican candidate of 1892—a result brought about by the fact that Mr. Cobb had 10,560 more votes than the Republican candidate in 1892, while Mr. Davis had 4067 votes less than the Democratic candidate. Going back of 1894 we find that only five times in 29 years has the Republican plurality gone above 20,000, and only once has it exceeded the plurality just given Mr. Cobb. That once was in 1866 when the Republican nominee had a plurality 560 larger than Mr. Cobb's. Mr. Cobb's total vote of 78,460 has never been exceeded but twice. In 1884 (the Maine year) the Republican nominee had 78,699 votes, and in 1888 (the year of the great Harrison-Cleveland fight) the Republican nominee had 79,401. On the other hand Cyrus W. Davis received a vote which is considerably in excess of the Democratic average. In the face of all these figures The Courier-Gazette has a lively curiosity to know how Monday's election can be figured in any other light than that of a splendid Republican victory. Certainly it was about 15,000 larger than the estimate made by a majority of the Democrats.

It may be, as Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens says, in commenting upon the sheriff elections, that they "go to show that the good people are not nearly so active as the bad people; that those who want license get out and work, while the people opposed remain at home." Assuming this to be the case, and it often is in relation to the primaries, it is an unconscious admission that we have a very large percentage of bad citizens in our state. But what is to be said about Cumberland county, for instance, where the people had it in their power to overthrow Pennell, who says in effect that the law cannot be enforced and that he doesn't purpose to try. Instead of uniting upon the Republican nominee, who won out squarely and fairly in the Republican county convention, and who was nominated upon an unequivocal platform, the temperance people saw fit to divide their forces, knowing as they must have known, that it meant the almost certain election of Pennell, the Democrat. Small wonder that the rum element laughs in its sleeves when it sees its enemy pulling in opposite directions. In Androscoggin county it appears to have been a flat throw down for the enforcement cause. So far as we are able to learn Mr. Cummings has performed his duty faithfully in the past two years, and the open bar had ceased to exist in Lewiston, a city quite as famous as Bangor in its liberality with the liquor traffic. In that county the fight was between Cummings, an enforcement Republican, and Cummings, a Democrat. There were no side issues, and it was strictly up to the people to say which they should have in the next two years. Everybody knows that the liquor element triumphed and from Eastport to New York it has been commented upon by newspapers of all political faith. In Kennebec county a similar fact would have overtaken Sheriff Ham, a Republican who has given Kennebec county the most rigid enforcement it ever had, but for the fact that it is a rock-ribbed Republican county and its majority could not be overcome. Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens says that the good people do not turn out and that she can see no reason for resubmission of the prohibitory amendment. The Lewiston Journal's intimation that the question may be thrown back upon the people by the incoming Legislature is a straw showing that an important issue has again become a factor in the public mind.

William L. Douglass has announced his willingness to be the Democratic candidate for governor in Massachusetts. Well there's nothing like keeping money in circulation, and the great shoe man will have an opportunity to see the boys blow in some of his superior coin.

Cyrus W. Davis telegraphed William F. Sheehan in New York that the Maine result is a protest against the Roosevelt administration. Really! We had looked upon it more as a protest against the possibility of Mr. Davis' administration.

The result of the Maine and Vermont elections is having its effect in New York state, which was loudly claimed for Parker a few weeks ago, but which is now regarded as safely Republican by 50,000 majority.

Bath's splendid victory last Monday, and in nearly every election, causes one to wonder why the Democrats don't let them make it unanimous in the Ship Yard City.

A late war dispatch says that the Russians and Japs have been fighting for nine long days. In this country we have been fighting for eight short hours.

Roosevelt's comment when he heard from Maine was a characteristic one. "I am delighted," he telegraphed to Chairman Simpson.

HINTS AT RESUBMISSION.

Lewiston Journal Disgusted at Sheriff Results in Monday's Election.

[Lewiston Journal.]
Two years ago the voters of this county contemplated the graft and corruption of sheriff-made law, and rebuked it at the polls by an overwhelming majority. Monday they went back on themselves by a more overwhelming majority, largely due to Lewiston and to Ward five in Auburn. This result indicates that whenever the people have on the liquor question they intermittently covet something else. No lawbreaker's drinking and the prohibitory law undertakes to stop the open saloon. When laws for the suppression of vice fail to be re-enforced by moral sentiment, we are sure to limp. The sheriff has been rebuked for standing by his pledges. Voters refused the referendum on prohibition—have gone outside of law and practically informed the sheriff-elect that he must consult their thirsts and not the law. That the sheriff-elect will obey this order, nobody for a moment questions. He is elected by the saloon interests to keep it wide open in this county and particularly in Lewiston. We shall have restoration of the old system rebuked by the people two years ago. This is all the more to be expected because Pennellism has won by a tremendous ballot in Cumberland county, and the real thing has been rebuked by nearly all the cities of Maine.

The legislature two years ago refused resubmission, but declared through its leaders that we would have two years of strict enforcement and then if the law did not work well, we would have resubmission. But the law has worked well. There is hardly a home in Androscoggin county but agrees that social conditions, so far as the rum shop affects them, have been greatly improved under enforcement. But good government has capitulated to thirst. Reason has surrendered to appetite. Men went about on election day declaring that they proposed to vote so that they could get a drink without having to go to a club for it or without having to go to their sideboards for it. Having worked for resubmission and been baffled, they took this outrageous method to circumvent the laws of the state by order of the county ballot. To impeach Sheriff Pennell is now impossible unless you impeach the people. The voters of the county of Cumberland, of Androscoggin, and other counties, have revolted against their own laws.

What is to be done about it? We don't know what the people will do. We don't know what the legislature will do, but we know what they ought to be done. That ought to be done, which the Lewiston Journal declared ought to have been done two years ago. The referendum, in a year in which politics were side-tracked, in the year in which the issue could be put on its merits, outside party issues, would have arrested nullification, for whatever would have been the result, it would have put the law in harmony with the people. We believe in prohibition, but we do not believe in prohibition for conversation merely. We do not believe in dead letter statutes. All dead letter statutes continuously nullified should be wiped off the statute books, whether in reference to Sunday laws or to the laws of the rest of the week. Silent official anarchy is the menace of American life.

Much as we believe in outlawing the open grog shop, we would prefer anything but any law that has no lax or how loose, to the most rigid law, perverted by graft and by caprice in the shirvelty. It is up to the legislature elected on Monday, to throw the responsibility back on the people.

The Knox Election

Returns From Matinicus and Criehaven, With Revision of Ward 6 Vote, Gives Harry Pease Plurality For Register of Probate—Other Officers Will Be Democrats.

The Republicans capture one county office as the result of last Monday's election in Knox county. This is register of probate, the Republican nominee for which was Harry C. Pease of Appleton. There was an apparent plurality for Mr. Pease, but an error was discovered in the returns of Ward 6, this city, whereby Mr. Pease and Mr. Cobb each carry Knox county by two votes.

The error was discovered by Arthur L. Orne chairman of the board of aldermen who said that the totals credited for the candidates did not tally with the total number of votes thrown. The mayor and aldermen were in session canvassing Monday and Mr. Orne protested against the Ward 6 returns. Mayor Rhodes issued notices to the election officials in that ward and Wednesday afternoon the vote was recounted with the result that some clerical errors were discovered. A new record was made and sworn to, and both certified by the city clerk will be sent to the Secretary of State. The commission will naturally be issued on the basis of the corrections. In the first count Clarence D. Payson was credited with receiving 121 votes and Harry C. Pease 124. The correct count gives Mr. Payson 102 votes and Pease 157—a change of 22. On the face of the returns it appears that all the other Democratic nominees are elected although it is not certain that a recount would result in the choice of Judge Robinson as senator.

As a usual thing the size of an election victory dwindles as the final returns come in, consequently those who read Tuesday's papers that Mr. Cobb's plurality was about 2500 will be surprised to learn that the real plurality of The Courier-Gazette was in communication with the Associated Press Wednesday afternoon and learned that the returns were all in except from about 20 small towns and plantations. These returns showed conclusively that the Republican victory will be over 27,000. This is 2000 more than in the last state election and about 12,000 more than was claimed by any of the Republican leaders.

The four Congressmen are elected by pluralities ranging from 4000 to 7000. Congressman Littlefield is re-elected by over 6000, and that in spite of the fact that Androscoggin county, where he resides, has voted for the Democrats. Twenty six of the 31 Senators will be Republicans and four-fifths of the members of the House will be of that faith. Here are a few of the towns which aspired to the Republican banner, and which are entirely entitled to the thanks of the party:

Oh! that we had a few of these gallant Republican towns in the county of Knox.

An admirable resume of the election and the campaign which preceded it, is found in the Portland Press of Wednesday, which we reproduce as follows:

In reviewing the result of the Maine election and considering it in the light of larger knowledge and mature reflection than was possible on the midnight of Monday, we find one thing looming up large. That is that Maine has given the Roosevelt administration a splendid endorsement. In a total vote probably the largest cast with three exceptions—these were in the years 1892, 1894 and 1896—Republicans have thrown the largest vote in the history of the party, if the full returns bear out the indications of the partial ones, beating even the record-breaking year of 1895, any year since 1890, increased and 1898, 1904, secured with the exception of 1900 and 1896. That they have done this in the face of the fact that the Democratic party, reorganized and harmonious under the leadership of Cyrus W. Davis, has made a vigorous, aggressive and hopeful campaign, is a thing of immense import.

Coupled with the Vermont vote a few days earlier, to say nothing of the tremendous Republican majority in Oregon in June, it clearly indicates that the current of popular opinion in the country at large is running strongly in favor of Roosevelt, and it makes it plain that the Republican party is morally certain. The Democrats will whistle to keep their courage up and will go through their campaign with a great show of confidence, but it is all put on. The returns from Maine have caused them to tremble in their boots and quake in their hearts. They see the forecasted shadow of a coming event. To all intents and purposes Chairman Taggart might as well shut up shop and return to Indiana.

Mr. Davis made a stirring campaign; he should receive credit for that and he deserves well of his party; but he rather overdid the thing. He started out with the attempt to show that on the basis of the census the Republican party was actually a minority party in the state, and that if the stay-at-home could be induced to come out and vote the party would be swamped. Assuming it to be a fact that so many of the qualified voters habitually omit to vote, we do not see that Mr. Davis has made any great impression by his rallying call; and indeed he soon dropped and dwelt on other issues. He made a thorough canvass, speaking in every county and in some of them several times, and in all that he said and did he was backed up in a strenuous way by his personal organ at Waterville.

He forced state issues to the front, and the Republicans, nothing loth, met him on these; he attacked the Republican administration of state affairs on the score of extravagance, accusing it of having increased the expenditures two or three times in the past twenty years; made much of alleged Republican disaffection; said the Republicans had "jumped up" the valuation unreasonably, unvarnishedly, and out of proportion to the growth of the population and that this had been done in order to wring more money out of the taxpayers without their knowing it; claimed that the "iron hand taxation" had never rested so heavily on the farmers of the state as now; charged the Republicans with having spent more money in the interests of the sportsmen and the farmers, and with other misdeeds too numerous to mention. But Mr. Davis's appeals to class prejudice have evidently failed, for it is plain that the country towns stand by the Republicans colors and that Democratic gains have been made in the cities, where local issues respecting sumptuary legislation have naturally tended to swell the Democratic vote.

Mr. Davis's efforts to bag the farmer vote have been in vain. The returns show that the great majority of the state have failed to be impressed by his arguments and are content with Republican administration. Mr. Cobb met him promptly on the state issues and discussed them in all parts of the state fully, frankly and earnestly, making by his candor a good impression on the people. Then, too, an unexpected personal attack upon him, probably helped more than it hurt him, because it aroused sympathy.

When we come to consider particular features of the election, we are struck by the fact that the people have discriminated, to a large extent, between the general and local issues, as evidenced in their voting. On the one hand they have given the national and state administrations a magnificent endorsement, while on the other hand they have done a good deal of independent voting and have made it effective in marking of their ballots. Canor does not compel the acknowledgment that the trend of public opinion as reflected in the returns of the ballot box, and in liberal legislation regarding intoxicating liquors; in a word, toward a system of license and local option. Five counties out of the sixteen have elected Democratic sheriffs, namely, Cumberland, Androscoggin, Hancock, Lincoln and Knox, while in Somerset the margin was close. At the same time the Democrats have made gains in both branches of the legislature. All of the legislative demand for more liberal liquor legislation, and so far as the legislature is concerned some progress toward the resubmission of the constitutional prohibitory amendment as demanded by the Democratic platform, has been particularly noticeable in Androscoggin where Cummings, the prohibition sheriff, has been defeated by Cummings, the liberal enforcement candidate, not by a plurality as in Cumberland but by an overwhelming majority. From Cummings we have a radical change, and the neighboring county is in for a change of the Pennell plan.

Finally the proposed constitutional amendment to double the salaries of members of the legislature appears to have been overwhelmingly defeated. Many voters failed to vote on the question, either by oversight or because they did not care enough about it to express their opinion, but by a vote went to other parts of the state as it did here the question is settled for years to come. It is likely to be a long time before it is raised again. There was much to be said in favor of the proposition, but the voice of the people is the supreme law.

Not the least of Mr. Cobb's new duties upon being elected governor of Maine is the task of answering the claims of the legislature for gratuity which have poured in upon him steadily since the result became known. These messages are from prominent state politicians and citizens of this and other states, and express gratification that Mr. Cobb should have achieved such a glorious victory in the face of the great fight made by the Democrats and the peculiar conditions existing in his own party. One of the first messages he received was a telegram from F. M. Simpson, chairman of the Republican state committee—an indefatigable worker, who is entitled to no little credit for the fine showing made by the Republican party in the year 1904. Mr. Simpson said: "Accept my most hearty congratulations. We have carried the state by more than 25,000. You have a right to feel proud of your magnificent victory over a persistent and united Democracy. I predict for you a successful and popular administration."

At the same time Mr. Simpson also sent Congressman Littlefield a congratulatory message worded as follows: "My sincere congratulations on the splendid victory won by the Republicans, today. A victory to the success of which you have so nobly contributed." Wednesday forenoon there came to Mr. Cobb a telegram from Hon. Chas. W. Fairbanks, the candidate for vice president, who said: "Accept my heartiest congratulations upon your magnificent and well deserved victory. I am proud to have you as my fellow citizen."

Mr. Fairbanks spoke twice during the campaign in conjunction with Mr. Cobb, and formed for our governor-elect the most sincere admiration—a sentiment which he handsomely expressed in words at the memorable Camden rally of Sept. 7. Mr. Cobb will have an opportunity to send back a telegram of a similar nature early in November.

Tuesday afternoon Mr. Cobb was called up on the telephone by Hon. Cyrus W. Davis of Waterville, who congratulated his successful opponent and hastened to assure him of hearty assistance whenever the occasion might arise. Mr. Cobb was especially gratified at the sentiment expressed by his late rival. Summed up in a nutshell it will be seen that two gentlemen and gentlemen of exceptional ability have been pitted against each other.

It was a splendid victory which Hon. William T. Cobb won at the polls Monday and we congratulate him on it. He made a thorough canvass, speaking in every county and in some of them several times, and in all that he said and did he was backed up in a strenuous way by his personal organ at Waterville. He forced state issues to the front, and the Republicans, nothing loth, met him on these; he attacked the Republican administration of state affairs on the score of extravagance, accusing it of having increased the expenditures two or three times in the past twenty years; made much of alleged Republican disaffection; said the Republicans had "jumped up" the valuation unreasonably, unvarnishedly, and out of proportion to the growth of the population and that this had been done in order to wring more money out of the party in this state. It shows the difficulty the Democrats will have in repairing the damage done their party in this section of the country eight years ago.

The Cobb Club headquarters in Berry block, which has been the scene of some very lively political meetings in the past four months, was closed Tuesday and that organization will take a well earned vacation until the next campaign. The Cobb Club was organized last April to advance the candidacy of Hon. William T. Cobb. Its membership grew very rapidly and prior to last Monday's election some 700 names had been enrolled.

This club held meetings every Friday night, rain or shine, and something in the way of an attractive program was arranged for each session. Slide trips were made to St. George, Warren, Thomaston, Camden, Rockport, North Haven, Hurlburt, Vinalhaven and Union and each of these excursions will be looked back upon with prime pleasure by all who took part. The Bangor trip was, of course, the greatest event in the history of the club, which journeyed to the Queen City over 500 strong, and played a most important part in the nomination of Knox county's first governor. The club arrived in Bangor at the moment when the crisis had been reached and the inspiring presence of that fine body of enthusiastic Cobb men carried the day. Mr. Cobb's own feelings about the club's assistance were told in a very eloquent message which was read at a subsequent meeting. The excursions to the neighboring towns in Knox county were always well attended and were utterly devoid of rowdy features that the club could not but make a good impression. In nearly all these trips the Republicans were accompanied by the Rockland Military Band, and they take this method of expressing their appreciation of the fine service given by that enterprising organization. This band had a fine repertoire of selections, none more popular, however, than "Here's To You, William Cobb."

The president of the Cobb Club was Mr. Cobb's business partner, Fred W. Wight, who made a splendid presiding officer and who never allowed the interest to flag, even in the most prosaic business meeting. He was the master mind which did the planning for the club's campaign and which was in a great measure responsible for the effectiveness of that organization. He had the assistance of some able workers, prominent among whom were Capt. E. S. Farwell, "chairman of the committee," and "Jim" Donohue. It is worthy of note that Albert D. Sleeper did not miss a single meeting or excursion during the entire campaign. Scores of others were present at all save one or two meetings, and were there absent only because it was unavoidable. The average attendance at the meetings must have been about 75. The smallest attendance was 35 on one night when it had not been generally understood that there was to be a meeting. Under circumstances like the above it is any wonder that the Club was a power for the good?

The next gathering of the Cobb Club will have to countermand his order for a meeting on the night of Nov. 4, when they will have a grand jollification in honor of the election of Roosevelt and Fairbanks.

In compiling the returns for our Tuesday morning issue The Courier-Gazette was obliged to rely upon various unofficial sources of information, and it is not surprising that they differ from the official report as shown by the clerk's returns and published in this issue through the courtesy of the Opinion. H. H. Payson town clerk at Hope, writes that the correct vote for governor there was 89 for Cobb and 61 for Davis. In our Tuesday report it was given as 93 and 61. The failure to correct an error in the footing of the county commissioners vote gave the impression that Mr. Tolman came within five votes of winning whereas it was 105.

Joseph A. Green of Boston member of an active Roosevelt and Fairbanks club in that city was in town election night and had the satisfaction of being the first Massachusetts man to shake hands with Maine's newly elected governor.

The total vote for governor as tabulated by the Associated Press, was as follows: Cobb 78,460, Davis 61,320. Mr. Cobb's plurality is consequently 17,140.

The total vote for governor in Hancock county was 4379 for Cobb and 2598 for Davis. Cobb's plurality being 1761. Sumner P. Mills was elected Senator by a plurality of 1866 but he was

AN EDUCATIONAL CAMPAIGN.

Two Governors on Platform at Universalist Church—Good Meeting.

The educational mass meeting for Rockland, under the management of Hon. W. W. Stetson, State superintendent of public schools, was held at the Universalist church, Thursday evening. The meeting was presided over by A. S. Cole, superintendent of schools, Thomaston, who introduced Governor-elect Cobb, as chairman of the evening. Mr. Cobb, before introducing the speakers briefly referred to the good work now being done in our Maine schools and the necessity of a continued advance in all lines of general education. The speakers were Judge Winston and Governor Aycock of North Carolina. The Judge is quite an elderly man and strongly resembles the late Hon. T. R. Simonon in appearance and in quaint and humorous sayings. He occupied nearly forty-five minutes in the delivery of his remarks, and touched upon a variety of subjects. His references to "past differences" between the North and South, and his kindly references to Maine, and the recent strides in his own state in industrial and educational development were heartily applauded. Judge Winston is the State's most intelligent coadjutor and has been an active worker in these "educational campaigns." He is recognized as one of the most eloquent speakers of the section and has done the country so many good orators.

Governor Aycock, who followed Judge Winston, has stood like a tower of strength for law and order and every form of true social and educational progress in the South. He has given his entire time, after disposing of the duties of his office, to interesting and instructing the people of his State in matters educational. His success in this work has won for him the title of the "Educational Governor." He is one of the most impressive speakers of the South. His address occupied nearly an hour in delivery and covered a wide range of topics, the central idea being the distinctive principle of education, the developing and bringing out the best in everyone, and the repressing and destroying of every element of the bad. The meeting was thoroughly enjoyed by the large audience present. At the close an informal reception was held and many availed themselves of the opportunity to greet the speakers, and also Gov. Cobb and Supt. Stetson.

Have you seen the unique display in the window of the Nordens Drug Co., consisting of a life-sized figure using a National Vaporizer, also revolving sign etc. The National Vaporizing Co., are having demonstrations here under the charge of Miss Hayes, who will be pleased to give free treatment to all affected with any disease of the breathing organs, such as Catarrh, Asthma, Hay Fever, etc. These remedies are sold under guarantee of money refunded if you are not perfectly satisfied with the result after using for one month. Vaporizer $1.50, and mouth treatment free during demonstration.

MISS PAULINE MORTON.

The Charming Daughter of the Sea.

It is understood that the gallant men who wear the blue uniform of the United States navy are especially pleased at the appointment of Mr. Paul Morton of Chicago as head of that department in the cabinet. One reason for this is the fact that the new secretary has a handsome wife and two charming daughters. The late head of the department, Mr. Moody, now attorney general, is not blessed in this way, and though otherwise popular, this fact was against him, for the boys of our navy love to have opportunities of showing their chivalry toward the fair sex. Secretary Morton's family is expected to be an important social factor in Washington. His eldest daughter is married, but Miss Pauline Morton, a debutante of eighteen, has a career of "making love and breaking hearts" before her. She is likely to be the belle of many Annapolis balls. She graduated a short time ago from a fashionable school in New York.

While in Rockland this week H. M. Sanborn sold his residence on Broadway to Edward H. Hatch, who will occupy the lower tenement as soon as the Bryant family, which now rents it, finds other quarters. Mrs. Sanborn and children will remain here possibly another year.

Invitations are out for the launching of the schooner Ellen Little which takes place at Cobb, Butler & Co's shipyard Saturday, Sept. 24 at 11 a. m. Parties receiving them are also invited to the fish dinner which will be served at Crescent Beach, immediately after the launching. Capt. C. W. Sprague is to be master of the new schooner while Donnell & McKown of 196 Commercial street, Boston, will be the agents.

The Eastern Steamship Co.'s autumn excursions will be in effect from Sept. 20 to Oct. 1st, good to return 30 days from date of issue. The fare will be $2.75 and people who want to visit Boston and vicinity have an opportunity to do so more cheaply than they can stay at home. This low fare will be of especial advantage to those who wish to see the concluding ball games in the wonderful contest now being waged by the American League. Steamers leave Rockland for Boston Mondays at 6:30 p. m., other days, except Sunday at 7 p. m. Returning from Boston, the steamers leave daily, except Sundays at 5 p. m.

The winners in The Courier-Gazette's World's fair contest have begun to enjoy the fruits of their well-earned victory. They left on the 10:10 train this Friday morning, the party comprising Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Silmon of Rockport and Miss Loretta Burgess and her brother Asbra of this city. They will be away nearly two weeks, during which time The Courier-Gazette will pay all their expenses, and in addition provides each with an accident insurance policy of $500. The many friends of the successful candidates will join with The Courier-Gazette in wishing them a safe and happy journey. The prize winners were accompanied by Miss Emma Alden.

William L. Ford, city editor of the Boston Traveler, has been spending a week of his vacation in Rockland, where he is an annual and welcome summer visitor. Last week he was with the 8th and 9th Massachusetts regiments in Virginia, going as far as Thoroughfare Gap, where the second division was located. Billy has soldier blood as well as literary in his veins and not only went with the 9th regiment to "do the story," but in the capacity of commissary sergeant. It is rumored in military circles that when he goes to the maneuvers another year, it will be in an even higher position. Onward and upward seems to be his motto other ways beside physically.

The celebrated romantic actor, Robert B. Mantell, who has not been seen for several seasons in this section of the country, will appear at the Farwell Opera House on Friday, September 24. There is no uncertainty about the success of Robert B. Mantell in his new play "The Light of Other Days." The authors W. A. Tremayne and Irving Hall, have built a swiftly moving and striking drama of the stirring days of 1810 and 1793, when all Europe watched breathless the unparalleled excesses of the French Revolution, which has been described as "the warlike propaganda of the gospel of liberty, equality and fraternity." Later on the scene changes to the more peaceful days of 1810, and the contrast in the times, speech and dress after the lapse of seventeen years is very interesting to observe.

This season Robert B. Mantell, the popular romantic actor, is again appearing in "The Light of Other Days," a picturesque drama that had a long and most successful run in New York last winter. As an actor Mr. Mantell is infinitely superior to the later-day male star. In "The Light of Other Days" he makes a superb stage figure and acts with vigor and charm. His impersonation of Maurice Desmond is virile, fascinating and at all times picturesque. The play is filled with strong emotions and stirring climaxes; more over it is beautifully staged with handsome scenery and costumes. The role of the heroine is capably taken by Miss Marie Booth Russell, a handsome and talented young actress. The cast also includes a number of competent actors and actresses. Mr. Mantell will be seen here Sept. 24.

Katherine Willard, one of the brilliant and successful stars now before the public, is announced for appearance at the Farwell opera house, Tuesday Sept. 20 in Edward C. White's beautifully mounted production of "The Power Behind the Throne." It has been a long time since an actress has stepped so quickly and emphatically into the hearts of the theatre going public as has Miss Willard. Endowed with an attractive stage presence, a thorough training in the fundamental principles of her art, and a keen perception of the requirements of the role she is called upon to enact, she gives a performance of finish and power. Mantell's "The Light of Other Days," which he surrounded Miss Willard with a strong and well balanced supporting company, so there is every reason to expect that the performance as a whole will be a most enjoyable one. Advance sale opens Monday at 9 a. m.

The ladies of the Universalist church are requested to meet at the church parlors, next Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The sparring match at Elmwood hall this Friday evening ought to be the best of the season. Two good bouts are slated.

The Free Baptist Quarterly meeting is being held with the Rockland church commencing this Friday and lasting through Sunday.

An excursion party of about 150 arrived from Bangor Wednesday, it being the last trip of the season for the excursion boats from that city.

The "Silver Slipper" brought to Rockland the finest costumes ever seen on the Rockland opera house stage. From the feminine point of view it was worth the admission price to see them alone.

The field day of the Rockland Military Band which was to have been held at Oakland Park Thursday was postponed as the band and its friends had no diving suits. It will take place next Tuesday and there will be a ball in the evening.

George L. Smith, general representative of the Quincy Adams Sawyer Company was in the city Wednesday afternoon for the production of that play ranging for the production of that play at Farwell opera house Thursday evening Sept. 22. Mr. Smith states that the play has been having a very fine run this season, and has a stronger cast than when it appeared here last winter.

The upper portion of C. I. Burrows' residence on Summer street was badly damaged by fire early Wednesday morning. Shortly before midnight Mrs. Burrows had been awakened by the smell of smoke and in one of the rooms on the second floor quite a brisk blaze was discovered. An alarm was rung in, but Mr. Burrows extinguished the blaze as he supposed, before the department arrived on the scene. Several hours later Mrs. Burrows was again awakened by a suspicious sound and it was found that there was another fire. An alarm was sounded by C. M. Harrington and this time the fire department had quite a lively fight before the flames were subdued. Including the damage by smoke and water, the loss is several thousand dollars. It is covered by insurance through M. S. Bird's agency.

Newcomb, of Thomaston, will supply the pulpit of this church on Sunday morning, Sept. 25th.

FOURTH MAINE VETS

Held Annual Reunion in Spite of Storm—Next Year in Camden.

Owing to the fierce storm which was in progress early Thursday morning the attendance at the annual reunion of the Fourth Maine Regiment and Second Maine Battery Association was much smaller than it had been for a great many years. The veterans were obliged to forego their justification in doors, but they gathered around the open fire place, played cards, spun yarns and appeared to be having a very good time when a reporter of The Courier-Gazette called there in the afternoon.

Among those present (about 75 all told) was Col. Elijah Walker of Somerville, Mass., who allows neither distance nor advancing years to prevent him from being once a year with the boys whom he so gallantly headed in the early 60's. Another man who attracted a great deal of attention was S. S. Stearns, of Washington, D. C., who was a lieutenant of Co. F, 4th Maine Regiment, and who had not been here before since the war closed. To the reader's imagination must be left Lieut. Stearns' amazement when he found what changes had been wrought by the advance of admittance. Present Monday for of Thomaston, young in spite of 87 milestones, he will have passed in November was there; Charles E. Ames of Damariscotta, the baby of the regiment was there; A. J. Maker was there—and it was worth going a long way to see the veterans together. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Fred D. Aldus of Camden.

Vice President—J. E. Mears of Thomaston, George Bowles of Camden and Frank Aylward of Rockland.

Secretary and Treasurer—John W. Titus of Rockland.

Secretary for the Battery—John W. Titus of Rockland.

CHAPTER XIII.

WHEN Captain Bent entered the gallery room with his prisoner, he found Cromwell seated at the table, his head bowed over some pages of manuscript on which he was busily writing. The general did not look up for a full minute, until he had finished the sentence he was writing, then he raised his head and said quietly to the captain:

"Go!"

For one brief and lamentable instant the discipline which held the captain in its bonds relaxed, and he replied in surprise:

"And leave him unguarded, sir?"

Cromwell said nothing, but a look of such devilish ferocity came into his piercing gray eyes that the captain staggered as if he had received a blow, gasped, turned and fled. When the commander spoke to Armstrong there was no trace of resentment or anger in his tones.

"Will you oblige me by closing that door which Captain Bent has stupidly left open? You are nearer it than I."

Armstrong with a bow did what he was requested to do and returned to his place beside the table.

"I fear I must begin with an apology, a form of speech to which I am unaccustomed. You have been stopped quite without just cause, and I trust you have met with no inconvenience or harsh treatment in consequence?"

"With neither, General Cromwell, if I am not at fault in so addressing you. I suspect that there are not two such men as you in the army of the parliament."

Cromwell paid no heed to the compliment, if such was intended, but, although his voice was suave, his keen eye searched the prisoner like an eagle.

"The stoppage may indeed save you further annoyance if you intend to travel about the country, for I will give you a pass like to prevent such a mistake in future. You are in the cattle trade, I am told?"

"Yes, general."

"It is a commendable traffic, with which I have no desire to interfere. You know of no reason for your arrestment by my stupid captain?"

"Truth to tell, your honor, and I know a very good reason for it."

"Humph! And what is that?"

"Some nights since, as I was making for the English line, I stopped for refreshment at an inn where I had been accustomed to halt in my travels. To my amazement, I was refused admittance by a man who stood on guard. We had a bit of a debate, which ended in my overpowering him and forcing an entrance, and which was more successful—the dozen there gathered together, or me, with their sentry under my order—it would be difficult to tell. Swords were drawn, and I might have come badly off of the encounter had it not been that a friend of mine among the assemblage recognized me."

"I suppose you wish to mention no names?"

"I see no objection," continued Armstrong innocently. "I take it that the men were quite within their rights in gathering there, although I contended they exceeded their right in trying to keep me out of a public house. My friend was the Earl of Traquair. These gentlemen, finding I was for England, asked me to carry a message to the king, but I explained that I had no wish to interfere in matters which did not concern me, and they parted to meet again somewhere else. There was a great spore about a spy that escaped, and I have no doubt if he saw me there and heard the proposal made to me he might well have brought my name and description across the border. At least that was the way I reasoned it out with myself."

"It is very like you are right. Spies, unfortunately, seem to be necessary when a country is in a state of war. Many unjustifiable acts are then committed, including the arresting of innocent men. But I am anxious nothing shall be done that will give just cause of offense to Scotland, a God fearing country and a friendly. When such injustice happens, as it has happened in your case, I try to make amends. How far south do you propose to travel?"

"I may go the length of Manchester or Birmingham. The distance and the time will depend on the state of trade."

"If you will tell me places you intend to visit I will include them in the pass I shall now write for you."

"That I cannot say just at the moment. I wish to follow trade wherever it leads me."

"Then an inclusive pass, extending as far south as Manchester, will meet your needs?"

"It will more than meet them, general," said Armstrong, with supreme indifference.

"As you carry no message from Traquair to the king I can write Oxford on your permit as easily as Manchester."

"Thank you, general; but Manchester will be far enough."

"I may say that we are strict about those whom we allow to journey to and fro at the present time, and if you should overstep the limit of this document you are liable to investigation and delay, and I may not be so near at hand on the next occasion."

"I quite understand, and if I wished to go farther south I would have no hesitation in begging permission of your excellency, but I doubt if I shall even see Manchester."

"You will not be leaving Corbion until the morning, of course?"

"No, general. I know when I am well housed."

"Then, as I have much to do, I will make out your paper later, and it will be handed to you in the morning."

"Thank you, general!"

ing uneasily in the outside hall, Cromwell, bidding his enforced guest a cordial farewell, ordered Wentworth to be brought to him and retired once more into the dim council chamber. With hands clasped behind him and head bent, he strode slowly up and down the long room in deep meditation, vanishing into the gloom at the farther end and reappearing in the limited circle of light that surrounded the two candles, for the torches had long since smoked themselves out, and there had been no replacement of them, none daring to enter that room unsummoned while the leader was within it. The watcher in the gallery felt rather than saw that there was an ominous frown on the lowered face as the commander waited for the second prisoner, over whom hung sentence of death.

This time a clanking of chains announced the next arrival, who was preceded by Colonel Porlock and accompanied by two soldiers, one on either side of him. The young fellow, who shuffled up to the table dragging his iron, cast an anxious look at the forbidding face of the man who was to be his final judge, in whose word lay life or death for him, and he found there little to comfort him. Cromwell seated himself once more and said gruffly:

"Take off those fetters."

When the command was complied with the general dismissed the trio and sat for some moments in silence, reading the frank, open face of his opposite.

"You are to be shot at daybreak tomorrow," he began in harsh tones that echoed dismally from the raftered ceiling. I have examined the evidence, and I find your condemnation just."

"I have never questioned the verdict, general, nor did I make appeal."

The shaggy brows came down over Cromwell's eyes, but his face cleared perceptibly.

"You own the penalty right?"

"Sir, it is partly right and partly wrong, like most things in this world. It is right to punish me for deserting my post; it is wrong to brand me a traitor."

"Ah, you have found your voice at last, and there is some courage behind it. Desertion is an unpardonable crime. The point I press upon you is this: Your life is forfeit; yet, although your fault is unpardonable, I do not say it cannot be compensated for. Even my enemies admit I am an honest trader. I will bargain with you for your life. You shall buy it of me, and I shall pay the price, even though I do not forgive the crime. We will first, if you please, clear up the charge of treachery. You were visiting your own home that night, and as it is on the farther side of Rudby Hall your accusers naturally thought you had a rendezvous there?"

"No, general; it was my intention to have visited Rudby Hall."

"The residence of that foul, malignant Lord Rudby, so called?"

"Yes, but not to see his lordship, who is my enemy, personal as well as political."

"You are truthful, and it pleases me. Why did you make a foolish mystery of your excursions? I take the ease to stand thus: Your grandfather and Rudby were neighbors and possibly friends. You were and are in love with my lord's daughter, but since you belong to the cause of the people this oppressor of the people will have naught of you. You have risked your life to see the girl, who is doubtless as silly as the rest of her class, as you will discover if I let you live. Stands the case not thus?"

"In a measure, sir, it does, saving my reflection on the lady, who—"

"Surely, surely. I know what you would say, for I was once your age and as soaked in folly. The question is, if you will risk your life for her, will you do what I ask of you to earn the girl and your life, or will you refuse and let her go to another?"

"Sir, I will do anything for her."

"Then harken well. There was here before me, where you now stand, some moments since, the most plausible liar in the kingdom. He told me truths which on the surface appeared to be treachery to his friend, but which he was well aware I already knew. This was to baffle me into believing him. He rides to Oxford to see the king, and in that I am willing to aid him. He may tell the king what pleases him and those who send him. Little good will it do any of them. In return the king is to give him a commission to be handed to certain lords in Scotland. If that commission crosses the border we are like to have a blaze to the north of us which I do not wish to see kindled until a year from now. Then, by God, then, by God's will I shall be ready for them. We shall defeat the Scots in any case, but if this commission reaches these malcontents we cannot have the pleasure—humph!—we shall be precluded from the duty of beheading the ring-leaders without bringing on ourselves the contumely of Europe. Without the king's commission they are but brothers, marauders. With this commission they will set up the claim that they are belligerents."

"The commission must be intercepted at all costs. It will be your task to do so."

"DO YOU BELCH?"

Or have heartburn after your meals? If so, you know how miserable you feel. You're afraid to eat this or that and as a result you become thin and rundown. Take our advice and try a dose of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters before each meal. A prominent Southern lady, Mrs. Blanchard, of Nashville, Tenn., tells how she was cured of backache, dizziness, painful and irregular periods by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Gratitude compels me to acknowledge the great merit of your Vegetable Compound. I have suffered for four years with irregular and painful menstruation, also dizziness, pains in the back and lower limbs, and fitful sleep. I dreaded the time to come which would only mean suffering to me."

"Better health is all I wanted, and cure if possible. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me health and happiness in a few short months. I feel like another person now. My aches and pains have left me. Life seems new and sweet to me, and everything seems pleasant and easy."

"Six bottles brought me health, and was worth more than months under the doctor's care, which really did not benefit me at all. I am satisfied there is no medicine so good for sick women as your Vegetable Compound, and I advocate it to my lady friends in need of medical help."—Mrs. B. A. BLANCHARD, 422 Broad St., Nashville, Tenn.

When women are troubled with irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhoea, displacement or ulceration of the womb, that bearing-down feeling, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, bloating (or distention), general debility, indigestion, and nervous prostration, or are beset with such symptoms as dizziness, faintness, lassitude, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, "all-gone" and "want-to-be-left-alone" feelings, blues and hopelessness, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine, for you need the best.

A Severe Case of Womb Trouble Cured in Philadelphia.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been cured of severe female troubles by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was nearly ready to give up, but seeing your advertisement I purchased one bottle of your medicine, and it did me so much good that I purchased another, and the result was so satisfactory that I bought six more bottles, and am now feeling like a new woman. I shall never be without it. I hope that my testimonial will convince women that your Vegetable Compound is the greatest medicine in the world for falling of the womb or any other female complaints."—Mrs. MAY CODY, 2660 Birch St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Remember, every woman is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham if there is anything about her troubles she does not understand. Her address is Lynn, Mass., her advice is free and cheerfully given to every ailing woman who asks for it.

carries, and when you bring it to me you receive in its stead pardon and promotion. If you do not succeed before you reach Carlisle, then I must crush him, possibly kill him as a spy. Will you undertake it?"

"Tis an ungracious office you would bestow upon me, sir. I had rather meet him in fair fight and slay him or have him slay me, as God willed."

"There speaks youth!" cried Cromwell impatiently. "This man is a treacherous, lying spy, whose life by all the rules of war is already forfeit. I propose to discomfit him with his own weapons. Nay, more, I willingly save him from the destruction he merits. You are set to do him the greatest service one man can offer another. If you fail, he dies; if you succeed, he has probably a long life before him."

"Sir, you are in the right, and your argument is irrefragable. I accept your command willingly."

A gleam of pleasure lit the rugged face of the general, for he was flattered to believe his prowess in dexterity was no less potent than his genius in war. His voice softened perceptibly as he continued:

"You save your country and at the same time save your country's enemy. What excuse will you give to Armstrong for your desire to visit Oxford?"

"My friend, the son of Lord Roddy, is there. Although we are on opposite sides, he has none of the bitterness against me shown by his father. I will say I wish to confer with him."

"That will serve. Now this pass is for two, and you can offer to Armstrong safe conduct under your guidance, giving what plea you choose for the absence of the man who was to accompany you and who, it may be, was supposed to have procured this pass from me."

Cromwell folded the pass and handed it to young Wentworth. "Go. This paper is your safeguard. I shall give the order that you are to be well mounted and provided with money. Send Captain Bent to me as you pass Oxford."

Once more alone, Cromwell wrote the pass for Armstrong, giving him permission to travel between Carlisle and Manchester. When he had finished writing, Captain Bent was standing beside the table, and to him he delivered the paper.

"You will give that to your late prisoner," he said. "He is to depart tomorrow morning, not before 8 o'clock, and is to travel unmolested. You have accomplished your duties well, captain, and your services shall not be forgotten."

The silent but gratified captain left the room with straighter shoulders than had marked his previous exit. His chief looked up at the dark gallery and called out, "Come down and report yourself to the officer of the night."

For nearly ten minutes Cromwell sat at the table in silence, save for the busy scratching of his pen. Then he rose wearily, with a deep sigh, his marked face seemingly years older than when he had entered the room. Once outside, he gave Colonel Porlock the papers he had written and said:

"The finding of the court martial is approved, but the sentence is suspended. It is possible that Wentworth may render such service to the state as will annul the sentence against him. You will give him every assistance he requires of you and the amount of money set down in this order. Bring out my horse."

When the animal was brought to the lawn the general mounted with some difficulty, more like an old man than a leader of cavalry. The two silent horsemen behind him, he disappeared once more into the night, as he had come.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know It.

How to Find Out. Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do. There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. sizes.

You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail.

Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Home of Swamp-Root, Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

HERALD RANGES

These ranges save fuel because the construction of the flues is the best for economy; all parts of the oven are evenly heated with the least amount of fuel.

The oven back being triple, the heat is kept in the oven; this saves coal and makes the range bake better, as the ordinary stoves are of single thickness.

Every Range is carefully inspected before leaving the manufacturer.

How to Can Small Fruits.
If you want your small fruits, such as berries, to taste like fresh fruit, try this way of doing them up: Wash your cans thoroughly, fill the rubbers on, then fill with the cleaned fruit as possible without crushing. When the cans are full place sugar in a saucepan, allowing two teaspoonfuls of granulated sugar and one pint of water to each quart can. Stir until sugar dissolves, then boil until it drops like honey from the spoon. Wrap the cans in a cloth wrung from hot water, then pour in the hot syrup, filling to overflowing. Screw on the tops, set upside down and leave until the next day. Then see that the covers are tight and set in a cool, dark place.

How to Serve Sardines.
In serving sardines many people drain and wipe the fish, and, after placing on the serving platter, pour a teaspoonful of pure olive oil over each. This is supposed to render them more delicate in flavor.

WHAT IS CATARRH?

Hymel Only Guaranteed Cure For This Common and Disagreeable Disease.

Hymel cures catarrh by the simple method of breathing it into the air passages and lungs. It kills the germs of catarrhal poison, heals and soothes the irritated mucous membrane, and effectively drives this disease from the system.

If you have any of the following symptoms, catarrhal germs are at work somewhere in the mucous membrane of the throat, bronchial tubes or tissues of the lungs.

offensive breath
dryness of the nose
pain across the eyes
pain in back of the head
pain in front of the head tendency to take cold burning pain in the throat hawking to clear the chest
a cough stitch in side
loss of flesh
variable appetite
low spirited at times raising of frothy mucus expectorating yellow matter difficulty in breathing frequent sneezing

Hymel will destroy activity of all catarrhal germs in the respiratory organs and in a few weeks the cure will be complete.

This is a strong statement, but C. H. Pendleton and W. H. Kittredge emphasize it by agreeing to refund your money if Hymel does not cure.

THOMASTON.

William Lamson Jordan and Rebecca Wiley Jordan celebrated the 50th anniversary of their marriage last Wednesday. It was a pleasant and unostentatious occasion, all of the family being present with one exception, O. W. Jordan of Merrimack, Mass. The children there were Edwin P., Willis K., Albert R., Melvin P., Zetta V., Charles M., Mrs. Irene Woodcock. Mr. Jordan was born in Warren July 19, 1851, and his wife in the same town, March 31, 1854. They were married in the Free Will Baptist church at Rockland by the late Rev. W. H. Littlefield. The members of Co. H arrived home Monday and looked tired and worn.

It must not be forgotten that Mr. Thomas E. Watson is the most forceful and resourceful leader the Populists have ever had. He is a good deal of a fighter. He seems determined to defeat Parker, and this attitude is natural in view of the relation which Parker sustains toward the Populistic element of his own party, from which Mr. Watson hopes to draw in building up his own organization. Weaver, the last Populist nominee for President who ran without fusion, received 16,439 votes in New York—almost as many as Roosevelt's plurality in 1898 and twice as many as Odell's plurality in 1902. Watson will do a good deal better than that. The largest Populist vote will again be cast in the West, but in the East will count for much more in the result.—Kansas City Star.

Artificial Snow.

A curious instance of the formation of artificial snow was witnessed on one occasion in the town of Agen, in France. A fire broke out in a sawmill when the temperature was 10 degrees below freezing point. The water thrown upon the fire was instantly vaporized, and, rising in the cold, dry air, was immediately condensed and fell as snow. With bright starlight and a strong northwest wind blowing the whirling snow above and the raging fire below, a brilliant spectacle was presented.

How to Clean Straw Hats.
To clean a straw hat remove trimming; then scrub with a nailbrush, using a solution of oxalic acid, a teaspoonful of acid to a large cup of hot water; rinse hat with clear water, wipe as dry as possible with a towel, then place small iron in crown to retain the shape; dry, rettrim, and the hat looks like new. For a soft straw coronal often removes all soil. Rub in cornmeal thoroughly, let stand a few hours, then dust it out with a whisk broom.

Superintendent Public Works

Of Lexington, Ky., Says:

"Per-na is an Excellent Medicine"

J. H. HIPPLEGATE.

J. H. Hipplegate, Supt. of Public Works, 61 West 6th St., Lexington, Ky., writes:

"I find that Per-na is an excellent medicine especially for catarrhal affections and all diseases leading to consumption, bronchial troubles or stomach troubles. It also acts as a preventative and keeps the system in a healthy condition so that it easily throws off disease. It is an excellent tonic and a great appetizer and as a large number of those who have been using it speak very highly of its curative powers, I am satisfied that my opinion of it is correct, and that it is deserving of high praise."

Per-na is the remedy for catarrh. Almost everybody knows that by hearsay. Catarrh in its various forms is rapidly becoming a national curse. An undoubted remedy has been discovered by Dr. Hartman. This remedy has been thoroughly tested during the past forty years. Per-na cures catarrh in all phases and stages. There is no remedy that can be substituted.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Per-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address: Dr. Hartman, President of Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

CO. H IN VIRGINIA.

Brief Review of Memorable Trip in Which Tullison Light Infantry Fought—Lots of Dust, Lots of Hiking, But a Good Time.

Co. H of the First Maine Regiment arrived home from their Manassas trip Monday-morning in season to exercise their right of suffrage. While they had not been engaged in actual warfare some of the soldier boys were tired morning. For as though they had, and the unanimous opinion was expressed that it was no picnic. Several of the privates allowed their beards to rush while they were absent, but the girls recognized them.

It had been a hard trip but not a man who went on it regretted that he had taken it. Tired, dirty, unshaven, browned, they were glad they had gone. They would not have missed it for the world; they would go again. That was the general sentiment of the men. A few exceptions of course there were; but the exceptions were a very decided minority.

The Maine troops left Portland on the morning of Saturday Sept. 4. All Saturday and all Sunday they rode in the cars. Only a few stops were made, and these were unforseen ones. Instead of arriving at Manassas on the afternoon of Sunday, they did not get there until 8:30 Sunday night. It was then dark. The blanket rolls were in the baggage cars. Their provisions were there. They knew not where. But off to camp they must go, and off they disappeared from Manassas junction into the darkness, into the darkness and the dust. The last named element was terrible; it was the biggest cause of complaint on the whole trip.

When the men left the train for camp, they did not know where they were going; nor did they find out until they had traveled some miles and a half they marched, and then they were told to camp. All they had to lay their heads on were the trunks of trees. The blankets of the heavens covered them. On the way to the camping grounds a horseman had to be forced. There were no bridges; it was good old fashioned fording. The wagons had gone astray somewhere; there was little to eat. Notwithstanding these decidedly unpleasant occurrences, the men slept, for they were very tired.

Monday morning they were ordered out and attached to the third brigade under Col. Price. Others in the same brigade were the 16th infantry of the regular army, a Divisional regiment of Alabama, the First Texas and the 70th

A brigade drill was the first event of the day. After this was concluded, the men plunged into the war and it was fight and march, march and fight, hike, hike, hike, for the rest of the week. There was little rest for any of the men. Eighteen miles were covered in one day, and more than that on others.

At first rations were received very irregularly and also very scantily. The plans were not working as well as they had hoped they would. But after a day or two of hardship as far as the food supply was concerned, everything settled down as it was supposed to do, and then the men were fed beautifully with good clean healthful food. The meat was fresh and the canned goods were excellent. Nobody had any idea of going after commissary wagons to get their round regularly.

Special praise was heard from all the officers under his command for Col. Price, who had charge of the third brigade to which the First Maine was attached. Strange to say residents of the country took sides in the contest. The Blue army of which the third brigade was a part, was protecting Washington. The inhabitants of that district were reflecting that the Blue army of forty years ago sided with the Brown army which was on its way to capture Washington. They gave every bit of information to the Brown that they could about the Blue. The inhabitants constituted themselves an organized body of spies to note the movements of the defending Blues.

"But we did not need their help to aid us," said Lieut. Col. Chas. Collins of the First Maine in speaking of the retreating Blues. "We had a man in command of our brigade who knew as much about the country as any of the people there. I never saw a man like Col. Price. He knew every path and road in that whole district. Instead of following the regular highways, he would cut through cornfields, through the woods, or anywhere. He personally commanded the troops and the way he led them and got around the Browns and defeated them surprised the whole lot of us. We never saw any thing like it before. With such a man as that leading us, we didn't care how much the people of the district acted as spies, for we were pretty able to take care of ourselves."

Two things the Maine troops remember vividly. The first is the cornfields. These are very frequently used for short cuts, and they served admirably to form a screen for those passing through the fields. The cornstalks reached from two to five feet above the heads of the men on horseback. At no time could a man be seen moving through these fields, unless by chance a person looked diagonally, and even then he might not be sure of seeing what he sought. The cornfields were continually used by the Blue and the Brown armies.

And then the Virginia roads; terrible was the word used to describe them. Talk about dust, why Maine isn't in it with Virginia. Three, four, five inches thick. Everything was dust. The roads were nothing but lumber paths. Why our roads here are palatial highways compared with those in Virginia. After a week's fighting, all was stopped by Saturday morning when came the grand review. Not a man in the First regiment failed to put in appearance. There was only one who was sick and he had a blister on one of his toes. He took part in the parade and was then carried back to camp in a wagon. The march in review was nearly five miles long.

Saturday afternoon all the troops assembled at Manassas junction to be paid off. Company after company was sent away with their pay. At 5:30, the First Maine regiment was put on its train and then started for home. A sigh of relief went up from every man and officer on the train. Soon, how soon, nobody knew, they would be in their own Pine Tree State, in their own dust clouds instead of those in Virginia. Few cared to talk; everybody was too tired to say anything. It was now leaving time, and the men loafed and slept.

From Manassas junction the train

THOMASTON HAPPENINGS

W. S. Hinckley, of Lisbon, was in town, Thursday.

"The Vision of the Christ," is the subject of Rev. E. M. Cousins' sermon at the Congregational church, Sunday morning. The regular evening service will begin at 7 o'clock.

Miss Ella Sampson has been engaged as organist at the Congregational church in the place of Miss Cousins, who has gone away to attend Wheaton Seminary.

Miss Adelle Maxey has resumed her position at the W. M. Cook store. Misses Ida Colley and Alice Spear visited in Warren, Wednesday.

There was an excursion to the prison from Belfast, Wednesday.

Mrs. T. A. Carr has returned from a visit in New York.

Mrs. Fred Andrews and daughter, Dorothy, of Denver, Colorado, who have been visiting at Glenmere, will be guests at the home of H. B. Shaw until Monday.

Rev. A. L. Nutter, of Union, will preach at the Methodist church, Sunday morning, and lead the service in the evening.

William L. Ford, city editor of the Boston Traveler, was in town, Thursday, calling on friends. Mr. Ford is a very successful newspaper man and is continually climbing up the ladder. He will return the last of the week and square away for the Massachusetts election.

There will be a supper at the Methodist church, Wednesday evening.

Mrs. Mary Weeks of Waldoboro visited her brother, James Overlock, Tuesday.

Lewis Seavey leaves Tuesday, for Orono, where he will take examinations preparatory to entering the University of Maine.

F. H. Winslow, photographer in Vinalhaven, was in town, Wednesday, on business.

U. S. postoffice inspector W. R. Hinman, of Portland, was in town Tuesday, and went to Cushing on matters concerning the break which took place there.

The Margaret Thomas will sail for Boston, next week.

Misses Ella and Ella Willey and Irene Cousins left Wednesday for Norton, Mass., where they will attend Wheaton Seminary. Mrs. Willey accompanied them and will remain a week.

In the death of Freda A. Willey, which occurred at her home on Knox street, at 1 a. m. Wednesday, Thomaston loses one of its most estimable young ladies. Deceased was the daughter of Mrs. Almida Willey, her father Ichabod Willey having been lost at sea six years ago. She was 25 years of age, March 11. For some time her young life had been blighted by the coming of the disease from which she died, and last March was obliged to leave the store of Fuller & Cobb, Rockland, where she had been a clerk for several months. The first of June she went to Concord, N. H., to visit her sister, Mrs. C. F. York, where she remained two months and had been home just five weeks when death laid its claim upon her. Deceased was a member of the class of '08, Thomaston High School. She is survived by a mother, two sisters, Mrs. C. F. York, and Bertha, one brother Earl. The funeral will take place this Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Rev. W. A. Newcomb is the officiating clergyman.

Dunn & Elliot Co.'s new schooner is all sealed up and work of planking is rapidly progressing.

A Christmas cargo of all kinds of Santa Claus things is what the new schooner Margaret Thomas is going to take on her maiden voyage. She is first going to Boston, where the supply will be placed on board and then Capt. Balano will head the vessel for Rio where he is to land the cargo and make the people happy, December 25.

The electric car ride for the benefit of the Knox Hospital which was to have been in operation Thursday, was postponed owing to the heavy rain. Lady conductors were to have charge of the "register card" and were selected from Thomaston were Misses Mary and Annie Jameson, Lelia Winchenbach, Mary Jordan and Alia McCoy.

Miss Ruth Blodgett will return to Brooklyn, to-morrow.

Capt. Watson Dunn will get moved into his new house this week.

Col. Elijah Walker, of Somerville, Mass., was in town, Wednesday, the guest of Dr. J. E. Walker. The Colonel is an uncle of the doctor and during his stay in town met many of his friends who were greatly pleased to see him. Colonel Walker is 84 years of age, but he is a remarkably preserved man. When the Civil War broke out he went from Rockland as captain of Co. B, 4th Maine Infantry, and for his efficient service was made a colonel in 1862. He is the oldest person living who commanded a brigade during the Civil war. His native place was Union, and while here he met one of his old schoolmates, Christopher Butler. Thursday, Colonel Walker attended the reunion of the Fourth Maine Infantry, Second Maine Battery, Naval Veteran and Berdan's Sharpshooters, at Grand Army hall, in Rockland, among those who live in Thomaston that were present at the meeting were Percy Montgomery, J. E.

is fast approaching and the constant strain on the eyes of the scholars is once more at hand. If your children complain of their eyes smarting, or they look inflamed, or cannot see the blackboard at a respectable distance—say 20 feet—hold their book too close, etc., Bring them to me and have their Eyes Examined.

I will tell you frankly whether they need glasses or not. Eye-strain cannot be recognized too early in youth. Its scientific investigation by modern methods and its radical correction may favorably modify both physical and mental development.

There were only seven defective ballots in the number thrown here Monday. A good showing.

There will be a "weight" social at the Congregational vestry Tuesday evening. Ice cream and cake will be on sale. Come and try your luck. You may pay little and you may pay more.

Miss Myra Hall has returned from an extended visit in Friendship.

CARD OF THANKS.

The undersigned wish to express our heartfelt gratitude to the many friends and members of the W. R. C. and P. of H. for their assistance and loving sympathy in our bereavement in the death of our wife and mother and also for the beautiful floral offerings which were so kindly given.

Mr. Leroy C. Leonard and family.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. Almida Willey wishes to express her heartfelt thanks to the neighbors and friends who were so kind during the sickness and death of her daughter Freda A., which occurred at her home in Thomaston Wednesday.

OUTER LONG ISLAND

Election day passed quietly, unlike some of the friendly arguments put forth in the stores for several weeks past. There has been considerable discussion over the candidates for county sheriff, the Republicans being inclined to favor Mayo, the Democrats candidate, as Whitcomb has seemed to place in enforcing the law, and this place has a strong temperance sentiment. A much greater proportion of voters turned out than usual. The result was as follows:—voters eligible in the plantation, 41; voted 23; Cobb 17; Davis 6. No Prohibition or Socialist vote. Straight Democratic votes, all 6 Republicans. Two Republicans voting for Mayor, Democratic candidate for County Sheriff. On the question of increase of salary to the Legislature, yes 7, no 14, two not voting either way. Usually the vote is more evenly divided. Cobb's gain over the normal being about 50 per cent. for a conservative estimate. This is a small place, but these little towns are the political barometers! And the issues discussed here for months have been the great questions of finance and tariff, local matters, except the question of temperance, being ignored.

Frank Lunt and wife have returned to Boston from a brief visit to his uncle, Samuel Rich, Mr. Lunt has fine position on government work at dredging in Boston Harbor, as mechanical engineer and has been having a vacation owing to a mishap to the part of the contract on which he was at work.

Schooner E. F. Hamor of Mt. Desert, Capt. Brown, with two hands, cleared Sept. 12 at high water with a cargo of fish from Parkers' wharf, consigned to Gloucester. Guy Parker remains on board for two or three weeks to wind up the season's affairs.

Miss Inez Kingman, who taught our last school has a position in the grammar school at Bar Harbor.

Mrs. Alphonso Lunt has returned from a visit to her home in Denmark, Me.

Wm. Teel continues to improve. Everett Lunt hurt his knee nearly a month ago, and it has just begun to gain suppleness. He was wrestling and gave it a wrench. Moral, wrestle, but learn the science!

Lobsters scarce.

Hiram Lunt has built a new fish-house.

Mrs. Frank Gilman has a new Merrill piano, a beauty and of fine tone. This is the first piano on Long Island. Mrs. Rebecca Robinson has a new organ, which came the same day. It is said that Mr. Leach of the Maine Music Co., Rockland, sold four more organs before he left, in two days. Glad of it, and now the next move ought to be a singing-school. There is plenty of natural musical talent.

Very high tides.

Charles Lunt is digging the cellar for a new house for himself and cellar in a fine location on the west side, north of Wm. Lunt, Jr.

APPLETON.

The musical given Sunday by William H. Sumner on his beautiful grounds in Pine Grove cemetery was largely attended by friends of Mr. Sumner from Rockland, Belfast, Union and other towns. ## THE THEATRES

"Sweet as the corn which is husked so realistically and pure as New England air itself is the story of 'Quincy Adams Sawyer.' That is what the Portland, Me., Daily Press of February 7th, says about 'Quincy Adams Sawyer.' The adapter, Justin Adams, has strung together episodes which are replete with distinct and familiar characters, just the kind one expects to find at 'Masons Corners' a country town in Massachusetts, where the scenes are laid with natural appropriate stage environment. It carries one from the village postoffice in the first act to the Pettigill homestead in the final act, during a good old-fashioned

New England snow storm, all comprising four large acts and six tableaux. The play is a happy blending of a country humor and pathos in which the simple, pure charm of the book is preserved. The cast is perfect, each chosen for his or her part especially, and headed by James Hatcher, who plays the part of the young lawyer from Boston, Quincy Adams Sawyer. Miss Helaine Hadley has won herself a name by the manner she has played Alice Pettigill, the blind girl, as has George S. Lockwood as Zekiel Pettigill and Harry S. Robinson as Obidiah Strout. The quaint character sketches are well impersonated, while the others are well fitted to their respective parts. As a rural play "Quincy Adams Sawyer" is meeting approval everywhere.

THOMAS-BEAN

The marriage of Albert Walker Thomas and Lottie Smith Bean took place at the home of the bride 51 Pacific street, Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, Rev. E. H. Chapin officiating.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate relatives and intimate friends, and the wedding march was rendered by Mrs. E. Farwell.

Miss Della Bean, a sister of the bride, handsomely gowned in gray velvet, over silk, with gray lace applique trimming carrying a bouquet of pale pink sweet peas, acted as maid of honor. Miss Alice Fuller, gowned in white muslin with lace trimmings, bouquet of pink sweet peas was bridesmaid. The bride wore a very becoming gown of white silk crepe over white silk, with satin trimmings, and carried white sweet peas. The best man was Henry Sleeper.

The rooms were very tastefully decorated by Mrs. E. S. Farwell and Mrs. E. E. Hoffes, the parlor with autumn leaves, the sitting-room in green and white, and the dining room in sweet peas and maiden hair ferns.

The bridal party stood beneath an arch of maiden hair ferns and queen's lace, from which was suspended a bell, made of the same dainty combination. The corner enclosed by the arch, piano and mantel were banked with these beautiful ferns, in which sweet peas and queen's lace were very effectively used. After the ceremony a lunch was served in the dining room by Miss Bean's Sunday school class, with Dannie Rose at the punch bowl, assisted by Leola Flint, Anna Cobb, Ruth Blackington, Gladys Williams, Marie Gurdy and Grace Walker; the last four mentioned, also served in the capacity of ribbon-bearers for the bridal party. The bride has been employed in the office of the Telephone Company for a term of years, where she was a great favorite with all her associates. Mr. Thomas is a son of John Thomas of Union, ex-deputy sheriff, and is in the employ of Sleeper Brothers of this city. The presents were numerous including silver, cut glass, china, bric-a-brac and linen. Among the out of town guests were Mr. John Thomas and Mrs. John Thomas, Jr. of Union, Mrs. F. A. Gross, Mrs. P. D. Haskell and son Kenneth of Deer Isle. The prospective tour of the young couple was shrouded in mystery, much to the chagrin of the young element who trumped to the 9 o'clock train with a bountiful supply of rice. After a week Mr. and Mrs. Thomas will be at home at 51 Pacific street.

We hear so much about personality now-a-days, and that same personality is like electricity. We recognize it as a force, use it in all kinds of ways, yet we cannot analyze it. The great businessman, the great statesman, the great preacher, as well as the poet, the musician, the artist, the actor must have it to succeed. The newspaper has been talking much about the personality of Katherine Willard, which they consider very fascinating, and which they think is the secret of her success. One critic has said of the young star of the Power Behind the Throne: She has as Aria a personality as pure and appealingly sweet as the story of the life of the poor peasant girl. It is not genius, but more particularly nature which, after all, is the truest art; and the character is portrayed by Miss Willard with a grace and delicacy that has placed her in the ranks of the most capable actresses on the stage. At Farwell opera house Tuesday evening of next week, Sept. 20. Price 50, 75, $1.

At Farwell opera house Monday Sept. 26. Dan Sully the popular star and his excellent company will present, for the first time in this city, a brand new three act play entitled "The Chief Justice," written by Fitzgerald Murphy. The play was written especially for Mr. Sully and the Court of Appeals of the State of New York, fits that popular actor like a glove. The play is essentially a modern one and deals with the world of society, finance and law. It is full of human touches, brilliant dialogue, epigram, philosophy, wit, pathos and humor. The play revolves around three beautiful love stories that

CLARIONS DEFIED LAST WINTER'S COLD

Houses that had never been comfortable in ordinary seasons with other furnaces were heated perfectly with CLARIONS all through the severe weather.

Last winter proved for good and all the folly of buying a carelessly made furnace at any price and the wisdom of having a CLARION to rely on.

If you were one of the cold ones and want to guard against another winter of discomfort, write now for a CLARION circular.

In Theatrical Circles.

One enthusiastic critic has said of Miss Willard, who will soon appear here in "The Power Behind the Throne":

"Herein appears the power of Miss Willard, that she possesses the faculty of making the fictitious appear real; she owns that wonderful gift tritely expressed in the saying, art concealed through art. Her deep-souled midnight eyes, hold the on-lookers in a thrill. Her clear, melodious voice, fulled "Peck's Bad Boy," and this year a new show from start to finish. New songs, new music etc., are introduced to brighten up the old time play and nothing better has been presented at popular prices. Peck's Bad Boy is for one night only.

Next Tuesday evening Miss Katherine Willard in "The Power Behind the Throne," direct from the Tremont

ly resonant and capable of adequately expressing the whole gamut of human emotion persuades the most blasé into admiration. Her graceful figure, her expressive gestures, her all-compelling personality, her tact and intelligence, illumine every line of the author, often lending to the interpretation a something that escapes all but the most earnest student. Ambition beyond comprehension, with her soul devoted to the attainment of a high ideal in her chosen profession, gifted with the ardent desire to accomplish her object at whatever personal cost and sacrifice, all re-enforced by a strong constitution and an abundance of technical training gained in the best schools, these combine to make of her a player of superior intelligence. Her winsome personality permeates the play from beginning to end, and has impressed itself upon the supporting company, sufficient proof of which may be easily found in paying close attention to the work as the story unfolds.

Miss Willard will be seen at the Farwell opera house on Sept. 20th.

Miss Marie Walnwright, known to all the world as one of the leading exponents of Shakespeare's masterpieces, is soon to treat the play lovers of this city to her world-famous impersonations of Viola in "Twelfth Night." Miss Walnwright's role is that of the disguised page who turns the heads of the titled lovers of Viola without regard to sex, and paves the way for a very advantageous alliance for the long-missing brother, who is her double, while herself laying siege to the heart of the duke she admires. Miss Walnwright carries Viola through the jumble of complications with a delicacy of touch that makes her performance one of the most charming on the stage.

Remember the matinee on Saturday of this week by The Harcourt Comedy Co. The last two performances of the week this Saturday afternoon and evening. Prices for the matinee 10 and 20 cents evening 10-20 and 30 cents.

One of the most important engagements of the season is announced for Monday night at Farwell opera house when the production of "The Way of the Transgressor" will be given. This is a new play with superb comedy features, a number of realistic effects and picturesque situations. There are thrilling climaxes galore but all of them are perfectly plausible and natural. The scenery provided for the play is beautiful beyond description. All of the mechanical effects are great and absolutely unique. The company engaged for the production is made up of a number of clever dramatic people, and in addition to these a corps of specialists have been engaged, who will render novel specialties as a part of the play. The greatest feature of the play, however, is the acting of the four highly developed and educated dogs, Victor, Czar, Zip and Leo. These Land-seer dogs are not only the handsomest and swiftest of dog flesh ever seen in this part of the country but they are also so highly educated that they enter into the performance with a dash and style that has never been equaled. It will be such a superb performance of such a novel kind that everybody will be pleased.

George M. Heath will present at Farwell opera house on Wednesday evening of next week his famous farce com-

Theatre, Boston, will be one of the great attractions to be seen this year.

A play that will hold the attention of local theatregoers from the rise of the curtain to the end of the last act is "The Mummy and the Humming Bird" that will be seen here in the near future. The "Mummy" is a scientist so deeply engrossed in his investigations that he unwittingly neglects his wife. The "Humming Bird" endeavors to use this seeming neglect for his own base ends. He almost persuades the lovelorn wife to fly with him, but she is rescued from her fate by the timely intervention of a friend. The play is a comedy of the "Humming Bird" and the fatal step is not taken. A most unique character in the person of an ignorant grinder participates in the undoing of the "Humming Bird" against whom he has sworn vendetta. "The Mummy and the Humming Bird" is a powerful play, and out of its teachings comes a moral that would make the world all the purer and all the better were it carefully observed.

Now and then the theatre-goer finds a play that he would rather see again than an entirely new one. Quincy Adams Sawyer, the great rural drama success which is numbered as a most decided hit when seen here before, is a play that one has a taste for seeing again and its return to this city at the Farwell opera house Thursday evening, Sept. 22 will be hailed with genuine delight. It is fully expected that this New England play, dramatized from Mr. Pidgeon's widely read book of the same name, will prove even more popular this time than before. Seats on sale this morning.

The advance sale for "The Way of the Transgressor" opens this Saturday morning at the box office at nine o'clock.

Robert Mantell and his powerful company in the greatest of all Mantell plays "In The Light of Other Days" will be produced at The Farwell opera house on Saturday evening of next week, Sept. 24th, and without doubt will be the event of the season. Mr. Mantell has never appeared in Rockland and it is hoped that a large audience will be out to welcome this popular actor on this his first appearance here. A large company supports Mr. Mantell and the entire production is carried.

PIERCE VISITS NEWPORT

THINGS TO BE SEEN AT THIS FAMOUS RESORT.

Ancient History and Modern Society Interestingly Blended.—How the Stone Tower and Other Salfent Features Strike a Rockland Boy.

Newport, R. I. Sept. 16, 1904.

If our first parents should be permitted to revisit this mundane sphere and their first stopping place should be in the luxuriant gardens of some of the Newport estates, I have no doubt that they would immediately feel at home and be somewhat surprised that their former surroundings were not more changed.

If in the course of their ramble about the place, their footsteps should lead them to Bailey's Beach where the "400" bathe or perchance they might catch a glimpse of some evening entertainment, Mother Eve would probably casually remark that the advance along sartorial lines had been more in the line of quality than quantity while Father Adam, should he be favored with an invitation to a "monkey" dinner, would be consoled by the fact that he could not have been so badly off, when intelligent human beings of our advanced age choose their associates from those whose society was forced upon him willy nilly at a very early period of human history.

Seriously, Newport is the Garden of Eden of America. The same Master Gardener who laid out the Garden of Eden in the foundations of Newport, but the beings of His creation have done much to add to its natural beauty. Of course it cannot be claimed that such vast numbers would flock here throughout the summer season were there no palaces, villas, "cottages" and mansions to add to the beauties of nature. But, after all, the sea is the greatest attraction.

On account of the holiday I think the crowd here today was the largest I have ever seen here. The Cliff Walk has been taken by hundreds who have enjoyed the sun tempered by the cooling breeze from the sea. The thing which I noted most was that when the crowds sat down for rest, they sat on the shore and looked out at the water, spoke of the peculiar color imparted by the purple kelp, laughed as the breakers engulfed the more adventurous bathers, waved at the white winged yachts flitting about in the fresh southeaster and breathed in deeply the invigorating salt air. Behind them the palaces were forgotten, their whole interest was in sea, sky and air, the gifts of nature. The crowds do not all go to Newport to see the passing show.

But in addition to its natural beauties and the grandeur attendant upon great wealth, there is a third attraction, not the least by any means,—its historical associations.

Way back in our childhood before we have (some of us at least) come to understand that we are entered in one great race for the dollar and the man who gets the most is the best fellow, we are sent to school and there are taught something about the beginnings of our great and glorious country. In this study the name of Newport is not associated with the summer residences of the rich but with a structure, the intrinsic value of which is very small, but the historical value of which is beyond computing.

The Old Stone Tower, which is the subject of the Harry Payne Whitney villa, was built by the Norsemen. This is the universally accepted opinion although nothing seems to bear it out except the fact that the tower is known to have been in the neighborhood sometime before it was decided that the citizens of that day would support a newspaper, hence no account of its erection was disseminated and succeeding generations have fabled on this solution of its origin and taught it their children. The young geologist who some extirpating formation surrounding the Great Stone Face up in the White Mountains and announce that it is plainly the work of man and try to give one of the early sculptors credit for it.

When the earliest settlers of whom there are any records, came to Newport about the beginning of the fifteenth century, the old stone tower was there and their predecessors had probably through an oversight neglected to properly mark the relic because to this day, no one knows just what it was used for. It is commonly called the old stone mill, although some opine that it was used as a fort, some as a signal tower and some as a lighthouse. Anyway it is here, is evidently satisfied with its surroundings and will probably be here long after you and I have gone the way of those whose labor wrought its construction.

Other Historical Associations. The heart of the city is rich in historical associations. In Washington Square is the monument to Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry of Lake Erie fame and a hotel now stands on the site where he resided after the battle of Lake Erie. A monument to him, erected by the state is in island company, not far away. There is also in Touro Park, near the old stone tower, a monument to Commodore Matthew C. Perry, a cousin of Commodore O. H. Perry.

Many of my readers were taught in school that Rhode Island had two capitals, Providence and Newport. The old state house stands near Washington Square and in the Senate chamber is the famous portrait of Washington by Gilbert Stuart. There are two cannon in the square which were captured with the British privateer Tartar in 1778.

Set off the Square is the Central Baptist church erected in 1735 which suffered severely when the British took possession of the island. Adjoining this is the armory of the Newport Artillery which was organized in 1741. Not far away is the Vernon mansion which was occupied by Count Rochambeau after the evacuation of the British and here the Count entertained Gen. Washington on his first visit to Newport.

The "Cottages." Nearly everyone who comes to Newport starts at the head of Bellevue Avenue to see the show places of the island. The first to attract particular attention is the massive stone villa of James Gordon Bennett, nearly opposite the Casino building. Mr. Bennett calls his place simply "Stone Villa." Mr. Bennett lives in Paris and is rarely here more than two or three days at a time and sometimes does not come over for several years although his villa is ready like many others for their owner's instant occupancy. On a side street adjoining Mr. Bennett's estate is that of Mrs. Paron Stevens, whose husband made his money in the coal business like Richard T. Wilson, another well known Newport cottager, father-in-law of young Cornelius Vanderbilt. The Paron Stevens estate is for sale, terms strictly private.

On the opposite side of the Avenue is the Carly estate, a gay place but doubly so today on account of the opening of the annual Newport Horse show where the finest animals in the country are brought together as an excuse for another sartorial display on a scale with those made at Madison Square Garden in New York, the Mechanics Building in Boston and the Coliseum in Chicago in the winter season. Miss Alice Roosevelt is the center of attraction today in the box of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Eben D. Jordan is carrying off the honors with his tandem.

On the right of Bellevue Avenue sheltered by a high wall and massive gateways is Elm Court, presided over by Mrs. B. B. Rogers and her accomplished daughter, Miss Cynthia, one of the leaders of the younger set as her mother is of the older. Along the same side are the villas of Edward J. Berwind, the coal baron, and E. Rollins Morse, the New York and Boston banker. The Berwind place is a massive mansion of granite and marble, only recently rebuilt. The Morse dwelling is of stucco and in its attractive grounds is a fine Italian garden.

Senator George Peabody Wetmore has a grand estate, one of the largest at Newport, on the opposite side further down. The large mansion is of Fall River granite and the broad sweep of green turf entirely surrounding it set off to the best advantage. Continuing, many fine residences are passed but the owners are not of sufficient note to secure mention until at Rugles Avenue, "Fairlawn" is reached. This large estate was originally laid out by Ex-Vice President Levi P. Morton and was sold by him to Mr. I. Townsend Burden of New York but it is leased this summer by W. B. Leeds of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad. The Leeds, under the social wing of the O. H. P. Belmonts, are spending their first season at Newport and just now all Newport is lining up for the first attempt of Mrs. Leeds to break into Newport society. Both Mrs. Leeds and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, wife of the president of the Illinois Central Railroad and a Newport society leader, have issued cards for dinners and cotillions for Wednesday night and society is awaiting with interest the outcome. At present the betting is on Mrs. Leeds.

On the left of the avenue at the corner of Marine Avenue is the estate of the late August Belmont "By the sea," now occupied by Perry Belmont. It is a lovely back to the cliffs. On the right, the large wooden house is the Havemeyer villa, erected by the late Theodore Havemeyer, Austrian consul-general in New York. Again across the avenue may be seen the rear of the Bannockburn, which is now occupied by the Herman Oelrichses, and adjoining, the Harry Payne Whitney villa.

"Beechwood," the summer home of Mrs. William Astor, the undisputed society leader of Newport, is the celebrated Marble Palace, erected by William K. Vanderbilt at an expense of over $1,000,000. This massive pile has been closed for ten years. Mr. Vanderbilt gave it to his first wife who is now Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont and as Mr. Belmont also has a villa here, the Marble palace remains closed. Rumor reports every summer season by reporting that Mrs. Belmont will open the Marble palace and there entertain lavishly for her daughter, the Duchess of Marlborough, but the summer passeth, the Duchess cometh not, and the Marble Palace sleeps behind its massive iron gates, undisturbed by social strife.

The William Waldorf Astor place was built by M. Berrada, the Peruvian minister. As is well known Mr. Astor has expatriated him self and the villa is now occupied by Cornelius Vanderbilt. It is under here that young Mr. Vanderbilt set Newport agog by erecting a theatre in the garden and bringing the entire cast of "The Wild Rose" from New York to entertain her guests.

There are many other elegant summer homes on the Avenue besides these few I have mentioned. They will tell you that this is owned by a Philadelphia doctor, that one is owned by Mr. A. of Boston and another by Mrs. D. of Providence. Now a one of these houses cost less than into the hundred thousands and each costing a small fortune annually to run, yet you never heard of the owner before and consider yourself a close student of the newspapers and current events. Where does all the money come from? While some idea of the palatial structures may be obtained from Bellevue Avenue, by far the most satisfactory view is that secured from the Cliff Walk, a well-made and elaborate foot path opened by public provision and maintained by the owners of the estates through which it runs for the express purpose of affording to residents of and visitors to Newport an opportunity to walk along the shores at will with no chance of being shut out from any portion by the abutting estates of millionaires or having the walk interrupted by private restrictions. Beginning at Bath road not far from the public bathing
